Patricia Turcotte : Medicinal Herbs: A Complete Guide for North American Herb Gardeners before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Medicinal Herbs: A Complete Guide for North American Herb Gardeners:

2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. really excellentBy Callie BaxterThis book is so interesting and unique, I bought it for my boyfriend's mother who has TONS of gardening books, but she didn't have any quite like this one. It's called medicinal herbs, but I feel like it would be more accurately named holistic or complete herbs, because it really covers the whole range from planting and gardening to identifying and using herbs. And it's perky and interesting throughout. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. This is very useful for those who live in similar climate zones. By Richard L. Huffmon. Ms. Turcotte writes from the perspective of what grows in New England (zones 3-6). This is very useful for those who live in similar climate zones. Knowing from experience and understanding the importance of hands on learning, she brings a fresh point of view to the subject. While none of the herbs described are new to me, the ways in which she uses them and some of the combinations she describes provide a perspective that engages the mind of the reader.

This is the one and only book you'll need to learn, enjoy, and fully master herb gardening. Practical, easy to use, and engagingly written, this book takes you through all stages of herb cultivation and use: Includes USDA Zones 3-6
Preparing the soil Starting and caring for seedlings Placement and garden design Theme gardens, from Native American to Shakespearean Caring for container gardens Using nature's helpers bees, butterflies, and birds Processing herbs Herbal use in cooking, teas, scented and decorative crafts, cleaning

About the Author Patricia Turcotte is a retired herb gardener. For many years, she grew some 250 varieties of herbal plants on Wormwood Farm in Lisbon Falls, Maine, where she lives.
